Patterns of Moral Reasoning in a Sample of Kuwait University Faculty Members

Djilali Bouhmama
College of Education, Department of Foundations of Education, Kuwait University, Kuwait
boud72@hotmail.com

APOLOGY FOR PLAGIARISM

Djilali Bou Hamama, PhD
College of Education, Department of Foundations of Education
Kuwait University, Kuwait

In 2002 J. Al-Shehab authored an article in Social Behavior and Personality: An International Journal entitled, “A cross-sectional examination of levels of moral reasoning in a sample of Kuwait University faculty members”.

However in 2004 another article, which was largely word for word the same as the above article, appeared in the International Education Journal entitled “Patterns of moral reasoning in a sample of Kuwait University faculty members”. My name appeared, wrongly claiming to be the author of this article.

The reference details are as follows: Ali J. Al-Shehab “A cross-sectional examination of levels of moral reasoning in a sample of Kuwait University faculty members” Social Behavior and Personality: An International Journal, 30(8), 813-820, and Djilali Bouhmama (sic) “Patterns of moral reasoning in a sample of Kuwait University faculty members” International Education Journal, 5(3), 396-404.

I wish to sincerely apologise to the editor and the readers of the journal, Social Behavior and Personality: An International Journal and the International Education Journal for this plagiarism.

I understand that this letter of apology from me, is also being published in Social Behavior and Personality, and that the International Education Journal will publish it in place of the plagiarised article in its online full text database.

Djilali Bou Hamama, PhD
July, 2005